1. The Mongol group on Taiwan applied all the political pressure it could muster to have the Seventh Kuomintang Congress, which was held in Taiwan in October 1952, include on its agenda the following item:
"To put into force the Fourth Article of 'An Outline of National Reconstruction' as well as announcements, declarations and political programs made by past Congresses which would relieve the problems which confront the minority groups."
2. When the Seventh Kuomintang Congress failed to make any announcement concerning the minority problem, the Mongols concerned were vocal in their disapproval.
